THE GREAT BENJAMINS CIRCUS

This past Tuesday, the Great Benjamins Circus made a stop here in Chetwynd and put on two fantastic shows. These performers dazzled the crowd with highflying acrobats, aerials and daredevils and made the audience laugh with entertaining clown acts. Although the tickets were a bit pricey if you didn't get in on the free tickets around town, the show was well worth it!

The Great Benjamin Circus are third generation circus performers from Mexico and the us who tour and perform for small communities throughout Canada and the US.

It was amazing to see the organized chaos of setting up, and taking down the show as the acts were happening. The whole show was absolutely amazing and great fun for all ages!

MACKENZIE MAKES TOP 10 IN BCAA PLAY HERE CONTEST

There is only a couple more weeks to help neighbouring town Mackenzie get their new playground worth up to $100,000 at John Dahl Park.

Mackenzie is the only Northern town to make the top 10. Being that they are a small community, they need all the help they can get to accumulate votes.

BCAA Play Here Initiative has been giving grants for the past few years to deserving towns in the province in need of new play structures. Building these playgrounds brings together communities and can be enjoyed by people of all ages.

Voting ends on June 17th, so vote for our neighbours in Mackenzie by going to the website www.BCAApplayhere.com or through Facebook, Twitter, Google or Email. On June 21st, BCAA will announce the winners of the prize money.

KELSEY'S CHRONICLE

Although vitamins seem like a great idea to add that little bit of extra nutrients to your diet, I saw something on the news where a study was done to a huge group of people, that concluded that taking daily vitamins do not help you, and can actually do the opposite and hurt your body. I decided to read further into this and this is actually just one of many studies that professionals have done that came to the same conclusion. So what exactly are vitamins doing for and to you?

Studies showed that people taking daily supplements had no less chance of getting heart disease, cardiovascular diseases or cancers. This obviously does not include people who take a specific vitamin that they are deficient of, but those already healthy individuals who take one in the chance of warding off diseases.

Vitamins from a bottle are far different from the vitamins that foods contain. If you're already eating a healthy diet full of fruits and vegetables, chances are you're already getting your daily intake of vitamins. You could be actually harming your body by taking a daily chemical supplement. Taking higher than the daily recommended intake in some cases can cause a lot of unwanted side affects, and has also been linked to antibiotic resistance.

Multivitamins, containing vitamin C, E, selenium, zinc and other supplements showed increased rate of skin cancer. Singular vitamins didn't hold up too well to studies either. Beta-carotene is found in carrots, cantaloupe, kale and spinach, but taking a daily supplement showed no benefit in long-term studies and has actually been linked to lung cancer in smokers. Vitamin b12 can be good if you are vegan, vegetarian or anemic but doesn't boost energy as previous studies concluded. Vitamin E, naturally found in nuts and leafy greens, is great at helping prevent Alzheimers but supplements in higher doses increase risks of stroke. Zinc has always been considered the vitamin to ward off or shorten the length of the common cold or flu, but the studies not only don't match up. They have actually been proven to weaken the immune system.

Now I have no medical degree and am not telling anyone to stop taking their prescribed vitamins, but if you are a healthy individual, you're probably getting what you need out of your food. Supplement your diet with vitamin and nutrient rich food, not from store bought pills.

MEET THE MAYOR

We are still talking caribou. Why, you might wonder? The answer is simple but the solution is bafflingly complex with multiple interest groups pumping their polarized perspectives – real or imagined. From the office of the Mayor I can look directly into the northern extremity of the land base of the Quintette herd of Central Mountain Caribou not five miles distant. Their territory tends to follow the Sukunka River south on the east side and extends to about Hook Lake thence north and east with Tumbler Ridge about in its geographic centre.

East and south of the Quintette territory you will find the Narraway herd land base extending to the Alberta border but the herd, I expect, does not recognize such flimsy political boundaries and will cross at will to follow its food sources.

West of the Sukunka we find the Burnt Pine herd in the territory of the Pine and Burnt Rivers. The Moberly herd is to the west of that beautiful lake; it extends north to the Williston Reservoir, and west to the Kennedy Siding herd that borders the Burnt Pine and the Parsnip River south of Mackenzie. The Scott herd occupies both sides of the Parsnip arm of the Williston Reservoir. A quick review of your physical geography will show you that these herds share the land base with our major forest harvesting and coal mining activities.

Of interest and concern to us is the fact that the Burnt Pine, Quintette, and Narraway herds have been identified by the Federal Minister of Environment as at risk under the Species at Risk Act (SARA) and in need of immediate intervention. The Act requires the Minister to affirm the risk and make recommendations to Cabinet.

I just turned to look again over the green hills and valleys to our still-snowy mountains that we share with the Central Mountain Caribou. Vista magnificent! In glancing at our mountains and valleys (vista magnificent!), of necessity, I had to look over (in contrast to overlook) the homes of hundreds of people whose livelihoods are intimately linked to forest and mountain; a truckload of logs that just now rolled into town on its way to the mill.

These logs are our livelihood. By them we put food on our tables. Indeed, we even buy our tables (another load goes by) with the proceeds of the trees harvested from our forests. I stress the verb, harvest. We are not raping and pillaging our woodlands as some allege (there is more fibre in the forests of our area today than there was 50 years ago). I believe our foresters are taking a sensible and sustainable approach to the harvest, much as a careful farmer does with her fields and crops.

Naturally, it takes longer for a forest to regrow the crop. But regrow, it does! I've seen the evidence wherever I have travelled – North America, Europe, Asia, and right here in our own valleys and mountains. My dad logged and operated a bush sawmill not ten miles from the centre of Chetwynd almost 70 years ago. Today you couldn't find the location without knowing its precise coordinates. I went back probably 20 years ago looking for the site; had to tramp around forth and back but eventually stood in its place only to be astonished at the marvelous regenerative powers designed into our forests by the Creator.

But there are people who would shut us down and exclude us from the forests that we love and cherish (not sure how they build their houses and get from there to over there). One of them vigorously expressed her opinions on the Caribou Recovery teleconference this morning.

Happily, I believe our Provincial Government ultimately will take an approach not quite so radical. Nevertheless, it is caught between the Federal determination to carry out its perceived obligations under SARA and certain other international treaties to which Canada is signatory, and British Columbia's own interest in protecting a stable revenue stream and economic base with the families such as base supports.

Vigilance is always the price of liberty. Apparently vigilance is also the price of sustaining our rural, agrarian, forest-based, and wilderness-oriented ways of life. And vigilance is expensive (but not so expensive as failure to be alert and act)! The Regional District Board will need to secure immediately the services of a competent biologist with experience in caribou management to assist us in crafting the defense we must make to Government. Time is not on our side.

Oh, by the way, here is a marvelous little wisdom from the ancients that seems to be appropriate for our present, precarious circumstances: "The complacency of fools will destroy them." Indeed! My lack of complacency on this topic wakes me up in the night. That also is foolish.

Merlin Nichols, Mayor
