Canadians prepare for Record Breaking Fuel Prices

An acute energy crisis is making its presence felt in North America as consumers are finally starting to feel the pinch of much higher prices to fill up their cars and heat their homes. The average retail price of gasoline in Canada hit $1.45 a litre on Wednesday, according to data compiled by retail analytics firm Kalibrate. That's a three-cent rise from Tuesday's level and enough to beat the previous record of 143.6 cents, set this August. Prior to that, you had to go back several years to see higher gas prices. The average pump price topped $1.40 a litre for the first time in 2008 and then $1.41 in 2014, research analyst Suzann. While there are many factors that determine the price of retail gasoline, the price of oil is the biggest one, and crude prices around the world have roared back in recent months as supply and demand is proving to be more volatile than usual while the global economy is trying to emerge from the depths of the pandemic. Gray told CBC News in an emailed statement.

While there are many factors that determine the price of retail gasoline, the price of oil is the biggest one, and crude prices around the world have roared back in recent months as supply and demand is proving to be more volatile than usual while the global economy is trying to emerge from the depths of the pandemic. Like just about everything else, oil prices took a swan dive in the early days of the pandemic, as travel slowed to a crawl, factories closed up shop and the world economy effectively went into hibernation. This slowdown went as far as causing the oil price to dip below zero for the first time on record in April of 2020. Oil traders literally couldn't give away a barrel of oil for free and had to pay money to have people take it off their hands. Oil rigs went into survival mode to make it through the pandemic. But as demand started to creep back, so, too, did prices. After dipping below zero barely a year ago, crude prices are now back to their highest level in seven years, and analysts say higher highs are coming.

"We're probably going to see prices continue to rise through the end of the year unless we see another kind of COVID acceleration," said Rory Johnston, founder of the Commodity Context newsletter and managing director at Toronto-based investment firm Price Street. Normally, oil prices tend to ease off in the winter as demand for driving and flying in the northern hemisphere declines. But COVID has thrown the normal seasonal patterns completely out the window. Because of all of the pent up demand and these random reopening paths we're on globally, it's really hard to ... ascribe a very normal seasonal pattern," Johnston said. "I think it still is yet to be seen whether or not that happens." "Edward Moya, an analyst at foreign exchange firm Oanda, says crude prices could have a lot more room to run. "The oil market is still heavily in deficit and that will likely be the story over the winter. If the north has a cold winter, the prospects of $90 oil seem very likely."

I loved the dress that I bought at a flea market. It fit perfectly, and the skirt was a swirl of intricate pleats. I wore it confidently to an evening party and glowed when a woman exclaimed, "Oh, how stunning!" Yes, I was grinning from ear to ear, until she added cheerfully, "Hang on to it, honey. Pleats will come back someday."

your Horoscope

For the week of October 10-16

Aries: You'll be handed all the urgent problems at work. At home, you'll have to trust other family members with the housework. Your great strength is to bring loved ones together and lighten the mood with your smile.

Taurus: Before you get started on a new project, it's important to acquire all the necessary information. Even if you don't have a romantic weekend, planned you won't be able to resist temptation if the occasion presents itself.

Gemini: A few changes are needed if you want to experience growth or stability at work. Be bold enough to sign up for training that will lead to a more interesting position. Any changes will be good for you right now.

Cancer: It's all about the details. How you dress and present yourself will have a significant impact on how your career unfolds. You have a tendency to spoil yourself, and your friends will be quick to encourage you.

Leo: In terms of your health, you should receive some excellent news. You'll finally find the right treatment or medication to suit your needs and improve your quality of life. At work, the emergencies always fall on your desk.

Virgo: Your powers of seduction will increase exponentially, and very interesting people will be attracted to you. You'll easily expand your client base, to the delight of your boss, whose turnover will double thanks to your interpersonal skills.

Libra: You'll discover that you're an exceptional and irreplaceable person in the eyes of your boss. This will increase your salary and allow you to imagine a better future. In your love life, the scope of your plans will match the depth of your feelings.

Scorpio: You'll turn long days at work into moments of happiness. You'll burn off some excess energy by having dynamic conversations with loved ones. You always have the best ideas to improve discussions with others.

Sagittarius: Whether it's to settle a precarious financial situation or make a major purchase, you'll successfully negotiate a loan that will provide you with a better quality of life. As for matters of the heart, a more sustained demonstration of love would be welcoming.

Capricorn: When it comes to matters of the heart, you may have to adjust your goals with your significant other. In your relationship, and elsewhere, be careful not to hog the blankets and always look for ways to share. At work, keep an eye on the details.

Aquarius: Avoid missing out on sleep this week. If you're tired, your concentration will wane and your health will be more fragile. You'll be struck by creativity, and you're sure to complete a great masterpiece.

Pisces: You'll spend a lot of time on social media, and many friends will try to connect with you. A family obligation will get you back on track. You'll discover a new art form that completely captivates you COVID-19 numbers continue to skyrocket in North British Columbia.

Northern Health is reporting more than twice the amount of new cases than the provincial average.

As of Wednesday, 84 people in the region are in hospital, the highest hospitalization rate the region has seen to-date. r

In Tuesday's provincial COVID-19 update, Health Minister Adrian Dix confirmed, 32 ICU patients from Northern Health were transferred to other parts of the province.

"There are, I believe, 22 of them came to Vancouver Island, which is a long way from Vanderhoof, Smithers, Pouce Coupe, Dawson Creek, Fort St. John and Prince George. It's a long way. It's hard on them, it's hard on their families, it's hard on the healthcare workers. It has an impact on surgeries everywhere including Vancouver Island," said the Minister.

COVID-19 related deaths in Northern B.C. are up to 176.

Fort St. John made the biggest jump in first dose vaccinations in the province last week

An elephant drinking from a stream spots a tortoise lounging on the shore. He grabs it with his trunk and flings it into the jungle. A passing zebra asks, "Why did you do that?" "Forty years ago that very tortoise nipped my tail just for fun," the elephant said. "Wow, forty years ago! How did you remember that?" "Well I have turtle recall," replied the elephant
