FORT ST. JOHN RCMP LOOKING FOR SEXTING/SEXTORTION VICTIMS

Mounties in Fort St. John are looking for possible sexting or sextortion victims. They say they've recently learned from the BC Integrated Child Exploitation Unit that several local teens may be victims of extortion where they sent intimate photos of themselves to someone posing as a friend online. Investigators believe there may be more victims who have yet to come forward, and are asking parents to speak to their school-aged children about whether they have recently shared an intimate photo with someone online or on their cell phone, or if they've been asked to do so. If you have any information regarding this investigation, you're asked to contact Fort St. John RCMP at 250-787-7100.

DAWSON CREEK COUNCIL POSTPONES DECISION ON ROTARY LAKE

Dawson Creek council is holding off on a resolution to close Rotary Lake. At a January 22nd council meeting, a report was tabled from the city's General Manager of Community Services recommending the closure and decommissioning of Rotary Lake. The lake has been closed since August of 2016 after a 12 year old girl drowned when her foot got caught in a drain at the bottom of the man-made lake. The city and Northern Health explored the possibility of designating the lake as a pool, but estimated that infrastructure upgrades required for the lake to meet or exceed health hazard mitigation requirements could cost up to $500,000.

In a post on his Facebook page, Mayor Dale Bumstead says council tabled the motion for consideration at a future date because the city cannot afford the costs of the upgrade. He says he will meet with Ministry of Health officials to further examine the situation.

MAYOR'S REPORT

January 26, 2018

A Natural Resources Forum attended by 950 delegates would seem to be the ideal environment to stimulate the creative instincts of the naturally lazy mind. Well, sort of. But it still takes an effort to sit down in my hotel room and recapture some of the ideas that were floated during the day. (It's doubly hard to recapture some of my own thoughts.)

Are natural resources really natural? Our opening speaker, Chief Perry Bellegarde of the Assembly of First Nations gave thanks, from the podium, no less, to the Creator for our natural resources. Does he know something that most of us don't dare to think about? He was right to do so, but I didn't hear a solid response in support from the amen corner.

As it happens, we are here, along with trees, coal, grass, and the hills that support and cover these resources. That is, I think we are here and if it is true that we are here and not merely a bad dream by an imaginary entity of nothingness, then we got here somehow. I assume that Perry Bellegarde favors option two. Or would that be option one? Yea, option one.

Our regional prosperity is predicated on the prosperity of our natural resource industries, however the resources got here, and I am with Perry as to their source, but whatever your philosophy of origins, we share a common interest in and responsibility for our heritage of resources. This means that we are responsible to ensure that the harvesting of timber, minerals, and even grass is done in a way that leaves the environment in a better state when we exit the stage than it was in when we stepped onto it.

A tall order, it is, but our descendents will thank the memory of their ancestors for taking the time and paying the bills for doing so.

For the timber industry, we probably need to plant more trees than we harvest. Not sure how many more. That's a problem for the experts. When we dig coal out of the earth, we create a whole new set of challenges that must be addressed if we are to leave this world in a healthier state than we found it.

Most of us don't think of the grass industry as posing environmental problems that are looking for solutions. Think over the horizon. Grass is fed to cows. The cattle industry releases more GHGs than most other industries all passing GHGs at once.

I'll leave the solution for that one for better minds than I have in my head.

The greatest natural resource in our area of abundant natural resources is the human creatures charged with caring for the environment and for each other.

To care for each other we need jobs. Jobs are rooted in the trees we cut, in the rocks we dig to find the coal, and in the multitude of other resources scattered so prodigally across our great North East.

But trees in abundance and mountains of coal do not in themselves result in jobs. Living in this complex and interdependent world, peopled by others whose interests do not always coincide with ours, and ruled by people who are somewhat unpredictable and occasionally bellicose, we find ourselves from day to day having to react to circumstances beyond our control.

We can be thankful that we have capable minds (at least one with a well-honed sense of humor) at the helm of provincial and federal governments and leading our major industries who are preoccupied almost daily with negotiating Canada's way through the maze of politics, international relations, and fiscal uncertainty to find the best-possible long-term solutions at the down-stream end of our natural resource stream.

In the meantime, let's look to our own fiscal circumstances and keep our gas tanks full.

Oh, by the way, I just encountered this ancient wisdom: "before the mountains were settled in place, before the hills, I [Wisdom] was given birth" (a 3000-year-old proverb). Mayor Merlin Nichols safeTALK, about three hours in duration, is a training that prepares anyone over the age of 15 to identify persons with thoughts of suicide and connect them to suicide first aid resources.

This program alerts community members to signs that a person may be considering suicide. It acknowledges that while most people at risk of suicide signal their distress and invite help, these intervention opportunities are often overlooked. Participants learn to recognize when someone may have thoughts of suicide and to respond in ways that link them with further suicide intervention help.

It is intended that safeTALK participants will be better prepared to:

- recognize that invitations to help are often overlooked;
- move beyond common tendencies to miss, dismiss and avoid suicide;
- notice and respond to situations in which thoughts of suicide may be present;
- apply basic TALK steps (Tell, Ask, Listen, and KeepSafe); and
- connect the person with thoughts of suicide to suicide first aid help and further community resources.

KELSEY'S CHRONICLE

This week across Canada, many are celebrating "Family Literacy Week". This year's theme for Family Literacy Week focuses on healthy eating habits with the title "What's on my plate".

ABC Life Literacy Canada began Family Literacy Day in 1999, which took place only on January 27th, to raise awareness of the importance of reading and engaging in other literacy-related activities as a family. This is the second year that Family Literacy Day has been extended into an entire week of literacy-related fun running from the 21st until the 28th.

Families are encouraged to participate in events around their communities but also have the option of checking out all the resources available online that help support healthy eating habits and literacy in your family. With the verbs talk, taste, count, and cook, you will be able to guide your way through interacting with your kids and have fun through food-related literacy activities.

When talking about literacy, many believe the only way to gain skills is reading and writing, but there are actually several other ways to gain skills that directly and positively affect writing and language skills.

A few fun activities you could try: Make a comic strip or a kid's book with pictures, tell a story from your imagination, write a cook book with pictures. Pretend play grocery shopping, cooking and eating. Or if they are old enough, write a grocery shopping list together (the spelling doesn't need to be perfect). Cook together- Children can count, measure, pour, and mix ingredients, It's also a good time to talk and follow instructions. Talk about family food traditions and discuss moderation as well as options and choices like a donut versus yogurt, or salad instead of fries, water instead of juice, and moderation and additionally why these choices can be important for our health.

A few tips that could help: Listen closely when your child speaks. Be enthusiastic and responsive. Give your child your full attention. If they are telling a story and you don't understand some part of the story, take the time to get your child to explain. This will help your child understand the relationship between a speaker and a listener and an author and a reader. Encourage your child to express themselves. This will help your child develop a more rich vocabulary. It can also help with pronouncing words clearly.

By reading to children and engaging in fun literacy activities, parents are actively keeping their own skills sharp while at the same time strengthening the relationship in their family. You too can help strengthen the bond in your family while freshening up on your literacy skills with one or a few of these great activities this weekend!

May the wind be always at your back,
May the sun shine warm upon your face,
May the rain fall softly upon your fields,
And until we meet again...

May God hold you in the palm of His hand.
Amen
