TWO MORE CHETWYND BUSINESSES RECEIVE CERTIFICATES FROM MAYOR

Mayor Allen Courtoreille headed over to Saulteau First Nation Health Centre's in-town office and Zen Lashez & Beauty by Zanne Friday, March 12th to gift these two businesses a certificate recognizing their business.

Zen Lashez and Beauty by Zanne, operated by Suzanne Hebert inside of Pineapple Esthetics, says she started this business because her husband said he thought she'd be good at it. Suzanne jokingly said she thought he was crazy, but she saw it as a new opportunity and decided to go for it.

Andy Patel, owner of Little Prairie Medical Clinic, has allowed Dr. Banas (who works for Saulteau First Nations Health Centre) to use the space in his building on Thursdays and Fridays, and says he wants to serve and look after the community so they don't have to go out of town for treatment.

These certificates are part of an on-going project to thank new businesses for supporting and investing in the community and making their home in Chetwynd.

In the United States today, there is a pervasive tendency to treat children as adults, and adults as children. The options of children are thus steadily expanded, while those of adults are progressively constricted. The result is unruly children and childish adults.

At an art gallery, a woman and her ten-year-old son were having a tough time choosing between one of my paintings and another artist's work. They finally went with mine. "I guess you decided you prefer an autumn scene to a floral," I said. "No," said the boy.

"Your painting's wider, so it'll cover three holes in our wall."

My high school assignment was to ask a veteran about World War II. Since my father had served in the Philippines during the war, I chose him. After a few basic questions, I very gingerly asked, "Did you ever kill anyone?" Dad got quiet. Then, in a soft voice, he said, "Probably. I was the cook."

Health For Your Home

by Linda Franklin

This column is designed to address economical discoveries that will affect your health in a positive way.

Anti-Flu Cocktails and Teas

Blend and drink this cocktail at or before breakfast for a special boost to your immune system: 1 quart of water, 1 clove of peeled garlic, 1 lemon or grapefruit, a dash or two of cayenne pepper, or whatever you can tolerate. Be advised that low blood pressure, low blood sugar, blood thinners, and bleeding ulcers, could be accentuated by taking raw garlic, however, garlic tends to cause a more rapid percentage of decline in those demonstrating significantly elevated blood pressure and sugar levels than in rapid inclines for those with lower readings.

Replace your sweet drinks with herbal teas. Most all herbal teas (without caffeine) are good for hydrating the body, but many can also enhance immune function. Some of these teas are as follows: ginger, curcumin (turmeric), echinacea, elderberry, thyme, lemon or other citrus blends, peppermint, licorice root, chamomile, lemongrass and hibiscus. It is best to drink tea without sweeteners when using them for improved immune function.

We were an Air Force family, but our son could not grasp that fact. Anytime someone asked what his father did, he'd say, "He's in the Army." I told him umpteen times, "Stop telling people I'm in the Army!" It finally seemed to hit home because on the admittance form for kindergarten, under "father's profession," the teacher wrote, "He doesn't know what his father does, but he's not in the Army."

JOINT STATEMENT ON INTERNATIONAL DAY FOR THE ELIMINATION OF RACIAL DISCRIMINATION

MARCH 21 – Premier John Horgan and Rachna Singh, Parliamentary Secretary for Anti-Racism Initiatives, have issued the following statement marking the International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination:

“On the International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, we reaffirm our commitment to stand together against racism and continue our work to make British Columbia more welcoming, just and equitable for everyone.

“The last year has shown we must do more to address systemic discrimination and hatred in this province. Through COVID-19, we’ve seen a rise in anti-Asian and anti-Indigenous racism, and a worldwide focus on anti-Black racism through the Black Lives Matter movement.

“As a government, we are committed to a future where everyone is treated with dignity and respect, regardless of their race or the colour of their skin. We’ve already made progress towards this goal by re-establishing the Human Rights Commission and work is underway to introduce B.C.’s first anti-racism act.

“The COVID-19 pandemic has further exposed deeply troubling and long-standing inequalities in British Columbia and around the world. We are starting engagement on race-based data collection in the coming months to identify where gaps and barriers exist, so we can provide better services for people and communities. We are also accepting submissions from the public as we continue our review of the Police Act.

“Our recovery plan expands Resilience BC, a provincial anti-racism network supporting community projects focused on addressing racism and hate throughout the province. We are also taking action to address systemic racism in the health-care system.

“We know there’s more to do and the issue of racism will not be solved by these actions alone. Today, and every day, we must stand firm in our commitment for equality and justice.”

STATE OF EMERGENCY EXTENDED TO CONTINUE B.C.'S COVID-19 RESPONSE

The B.C. government has formally extended the provincial state of emergency, allowing Mike Farnworth, Minister of Public Safety and Solicitor General, to continue to use extraordinary powers under the Emergency Program Act to support the Province's COVID-19 pandemic response.

"The vast majority of British Columbians are following Dr. Henry's orders of seeing fewer faces in bigger spaces, but we all have to remain committed to flattening the curve," said Premier John Horgan. "British Columbians have sacrificed a lot to keep transmission rates down, and now unsafe parties and gatherings are eroding that hard work. We're committed to getting our province back on track and will be announcing enforcement action against those who continue to put others at risk."

The state of emergency is extended through the end of the day on Sept. 1, 2020, to allow government to continue to take the necessary actions to keep British Columbians safe and manage immediate concerns, such as recent outbreaks in some areas of the province.

"We put these orders in place for a reason, and they are not optional," Farnworth said. "Public health orders must be followed to ensure public safety, and I will be bringing in new measures later this week to address the actions of those who demonstrate their indifference to the health and safety of others."

Actions taken in the previous two weeks to support British Columbians include:

- Appointing Sandra Banister, QC, to conduct a review of layoff and recall rights of unionized workers in B.C.'s hotel sector as a result of COVID-19;
- Working with the federal government to ensure that BC Ferries is eligible for the transit funding envelope of the Safe Restart Agreement;
- Ensuring schools are ready to welcome students into classrooms by putting an orientation week in place to allow extra time to orient students and staff on the new health and safety measures in place;
- Updated operational guidelines on wearing masks in schools to help ensure a consistent provincewide approach to keep schools safe for all students, teachers and staff during the COVID-19 pandemic;
- Announcing plans to hire approximately 500 additional health professionals to increase contact tracing around B.C.,
- Announcing more people in B.C. will have access to life-saving overdose prevention, treatment and supports, part of $10.5 million to accelerate the response to an increasingly toxic illicit drug supply due to COVID-19;
- Giving renters until July 2021 to pay arrears per a new repayment framework for renters with outstanding rent from April to August 2020, posted to Residential Tenancy Branch website; and
- Extending emergency support for vulnerable people during COVID-19 through the temporary COVID-19 Crisis Supplement. The supplement will be extended for four months and will continue to be provided to low-income seniors receiving the B.C. Senior's Supplement and income assistance and disability recipients residing in special care facilities.

On July 10, the COVID-19 Related Measures Act came into force. The legislation enables provisions created for citizens and businesses in response to the COVID-19 pandemic to continue as needed, should the provincial state of emergency end.

The extension of the provincial state of emergency is based on recommendations from B.C.'s health and emergency management officials. Farnworth made the original declaration on March 18, 2020, the day after Dr. Bonnie Henry, provincial health officer, declared a public health emergency.
