My friend John and I, determined to see the world, signed on a Norwegian freighter as deckhands.

We were being trained as helmsmen, and John's first lesson was given by the mate, a seasoned but gentle white-haired seafarer. John was holding the heading he had been given, when the mate ordered, "Come starboard."

Pleased at knowing immediately which way starboard was, John left the helm and walked over to his instructor.

The mate had an incredulous look on his face as the helm swung freely, but he merely asked politely, "Could you bring the ship with you?"

Did you ever wonder why public business seems to take so long? I suppose you have, if you've ever waited for the gears of government to churn out a zoning change or a traffic bylaw. And the bigger the government, the slower the gears do turn.

It has to do with words. Words are imprecise symbols with which we all attempt to communicate our sentiments whether in love or in war or in the humdrum business routines of local government. The nature of language makes it impossible to ever arrive at precise meaning. We try to get as close as possible to consensus. We do the best we can.

Think of a word as an empty capsule that you might obtain at a health food store. You buy a whole bag of them intending to fill them with your own blends of herbs and grass juice. Then you try to remember what you put into them. In your inexpert attempts to fill these capsules with nutrients you may experience frustration and resort to buying capsules that are labeled by an expert; – you trust the expert is not deceiving you.

All of the words we use are like those empty capsules. The meaning they carry depends on a number of factors. The word itself has meaning. The inflections of our voices add substance and character to the message. Our posture as we speak says more than we think. The choice of one word over another with similar meaning will shift the sense in one direction or another.

So we do our research; we investigate; we study; it all takes time.

Hence, the office of the solicitor, the advocate, the lawyer, and the legal assistant. Need to come to a conclusion? Of course we do. At least we are expected to come to a decision. So we consult our legal team which responds in legalese.

The party of the first part (me) and the party of the second part (you) will agree that the party of the third part – and then the document proceeds to identify the parts and all the options available each with their ramifications. All of this takes several iterations by letter to bring us to understand that this exchange is costing us more than a simple agreement and a handshake.

But we live in a lubricious and litigious generation and we are afraid of transmitting some contagion by contact of hands.

Your duly elected Council with the duly elected Mayor have to be sure that we are speaking the same language, filling those capsules with mutually agreed-to meaning. This takes time. Some of our good English words actually carry a variety of shades of meaning. To wit: frog: the centre underside of a horse's foot; frog: a small, cold-blooded leaping animal that is becoming more and more scarce; frog: the attachment by which your bayonet is affixed to your belt; frog: a grooved device at the intersection of two railroads; etc and etc.

Not that Mayor and Council have debated at length on the plight of the frog. But it takes time and much discussion to understand each other as we debate the issues of community: taxes, infrastructure deficit, playground and road safety, purchasing policies, fair practices, spending of public funds, and beauty or practicality.

But that's democracy and we cherish our freedom to arrive at our own conclusions, make our own decisions, and fix our own mistakes, however long it takes.

KELSEY'S CHRONICLE

As I read through some tips to finding friends as an adult, I realized it's very much like dating, with suggestions like:

- Don't limit yourself to people who are just like you.
- Don't expect too much too soon.
- Be open and share about yourself.
- One call or outing isn't enough.
- You need to keep pursuing one that seems like it has good potential.

No wonder lots of adults have a hard time making friends. Not only do you have to be vulnerable and go out of your way in hopes of finding a tolerable mate, you also have to make sure that you're not coming off as careless, or on the other end, needy. Unless you're one of those natural social butterflies or one of the rare birds who still regularly hangs out with all your high school friends, finding new people is tough.

On top of the initial fear of putting yourself out there, there is the chance that your attempts may be taken as a sexual advance, ending in an awkward and embarrassing outcome. These are thoughts that a great deal of people feel. A stigma that a lot of people have is that they are they only ones looking for friends, or that everyone already has their circle of friends. This could not be further from the truth. As we get older, our priorities change and we tend to put making friends further down our list. A lot of the time, by the time we are adults we have developed a primary relationship with our spouse or partner, who becomes our closest confidant, and the need for friends isn't as important as it once was. There also seems like there's a lot less time to pursue friendships as an adult because of the rhythm we create in our daily routines. Opening up your schedule for friends can seem difficult.

Although making friends seems like a daunting task, and maybe one that doesn't seem very necessary, having a good friend is great for your mental health. Having someone to bounce ideas off, share with, even just someone to vent to. It increases your sense of belonging and purpose, boosts your happiness and reduces your stress, and can even improve your self-confidence and self-worth. As most of us have encountered, some friendships can be toxic as well, and recognizing a toxic situation is the first step in the right direction. With all the tips to finding friends as an adult, I believe these are the most important: Stay open and willing to new experiences and people and always be yourself, which helps attract more genuine people.

When Fred Phillips, retired public-safety director and police chief of Johnson City, Tennessee, was a regular police officer, he and his partner pulled over an unlicensed motorist. They asked the man to follow them to the police station, but while en route they spotted a North Carolina vehicle whose license plate and driver matched the description in an all-points bulletin. The officers took off in a high-speed chase and finally stopped the wanted man's car.

Minutes later, as the felon was being arrested, the unlicensed motorist drove up. "If y'all will just tell me how to get to the station, I'll wait for you there," he said. "I'm having a heck of a time keeping up with you."

*Coffee Talk Express is looking for Community Heroes

Here in Chetwynd, we have a lot of amazing people to celebrate. From fantastic youth leaders and helpful neighbours, to coaches, teachers, councillors, and many more people that make our community a better place. Throughout the summer I intend to expose these people for what they really are... "Heroes of Chetwynd."

Quite often people associate heroes as professional athletes or celebrities. In reality, heroes live among us performing small acts that win our admiration. A hero can be described in many words: compassionate, selfless, caring and thoughtful are just a few that come to mind.

I'm looking for people I can feature in our paper.

- the person who shovelled your driveway.
- someone who brings you soup when you're sick.
- someone who visits the elderly.
- a person whose smile brightens your day.
- or an entire staff at a local business.

I need your help to shine the spotlight on the wonderful folks that make our town such a great place to live. Email short stories, a few paragraphs or give me a call. This special someone who is worthy of recognition will be featured in our paper. Be sure to let me know so they can get what's coming to them... a big thank you for making Chetwynd a better place to live.

I had just pulled over someone for driving under the influence when another car pulled up behind us. I stopped what I was doing and ventured back to see if the driver needed assistance.

"No, I don't need any help," he said, reeking of booze. Then, pointing to the flashing cherry top on the roof of my cruiser, he continued, "I just stopped for the red light."

I was getting into my car when I noticed a dent. On the windshield was a note and a phone number from the driver. "I feel terrible," the woman apologized when I called. "I hit your car as I was pulling into the next parking spot."

"Please, don't worry," I said to her. "I'm sure our insurance companies will take care of everything."

"Thank you for your understanding," she said. "You're so much nicer than the man I hit on the way out."

While away on business, a colleague and I decided to catch a movie. As we approached the theater, we read the marquee. It bore the name of the feature film followed by the numbers '7,' '5,' and '9.' Assuming these were the show times, we were somewhat perplexed by their order.

I went inside to ask about it. "Our next show is at eight o'clock," the woman in the box office announced.

"Eight o'clock?" I said, surprised. "But the marquee says seven, five and nine."

"Right," she agreed. "That's 7:59. We lost our number eight."

EDUCATION MINISTER HELPS GET THE PEACE CHRISTIAN SCHOOL HASKAP PROJECT PLANTED AUGUST 24, 2016

crop that could catapult the Haskap to the top of the Canadian berry heap, alongside the almighty blueberry.

According to the scientific publications it is rich in antioxidants with its special properties of fighting cancer cells. University of Saskatchewan fruit program led by Dr. Bob Bors has been actively engaged in breeding and release of Haskap selections as potential varieties for commercial production. Presently, large cultivations of Haskap are mainly restricted to prairie regions of Canada due to its easy adaptability and cold hardness (-47°C).

The School Board and staff of Peace Christian School has agreed to participate in a research study in cooperation with the University of Saskatchewan and Dr. Ashish of Floramaxx in the Okanagan to determine the viability of Haskap as a new agricultural option for Northern BC. Teachers and students will gather data and report on how the plants grow and how much fruit they produce. Recommendations for planting in the Peace Region will be based on the results of the research conducted by the students of Peace Christian School.

These are exciting times as we continue to find new and creative ways to engage students in the process of learning. We encourage you to follow our progress. We are also inviting those who would like to support this project to sponsor one or more of the 1300+ plants soon to be in our orchard. We will provide updates on our website, www.peacechristianschool.ca, or you can always call us for more information. Please keep us in your prayers that we learn from the mistakes that we are sure to make and to celebrate the blessings.
