COUNCIL MEETING

The District of Chetwynd held their first council meeting of March this past Monday, March 5th in the Council Chambers. All Councillors and the Mayor were in attendance.

The meeting began with a presentation from Megan Harris and Charles Young of BC Hydro with information on a new project in the works for the Groundbirch area.

Due to the industrial boom in the area, there is increased demand for clean energy. The Peace Region Electricity Supply Project (PRES project) will prospectively see two parallel 230 kV transmission lines between the future Site C substation near Fort St. John and the existing Groundbirch Station. The placement of the new lines came after many alternative routes were considered. The design will be side by side "H frame" wooden structures and 58 kilometre long lines, with upgrades required at each substation.

The project has been in the consulting process since 2013, engaging in several stakeholder and First Nations consultations with continuing engagement with local First Nations regarding the "licence of occupation." Local governments have been generally supportive of the project. The project is currently hinged on the final decision by the BC Hydro's Board of Directors and will be decided in Spring 2018.

Next on the agenda, Mayor and Council decided they will attend the Peace River Local Government Meeting in Pouce Coupe on March 28th.

Councillor Rochelle Galbraith was excited to announce that Chetwynd has won the "Open for Business" award at the Small Business BC Awards in Vancouver on February 23rd. This award was won with help from our great shop local initiatives, the 17 certificates handed out to new businesses in 2017, and the hands on approach of being able to work with

MAYOR'S REPORT

March 9, 2018

Congratulations, Chetwynd, we've just received the Open for Business Award for communities in our category. This means that this Most Charming Community (another award we have recently received) is also friendly and welcoming to business. It's a commendable accomplishment to balance liveability and business and I want all you business owners along with the Chamber of Commerce and the District of Chetwynd to feel suitably recognized and rewarded.

From my earliest years I've admired charming communities where businesses and residences take pride in their appearance. Such a community makes a powerful statement to passers by, encouraging them to stay a little longer and explore the opportunities for a good life among people who care, who can, and who do.

I know it takes a lot more than good looks and a friendly atmosphere to create a lasting impression of an enduring community but these are the basics. They are essentials. Without them, and without the hope for more of the same, I wouldn't have called Chetwynd my home town for the last 69 years. (I wasn't born here and I distinctly remember my first roll down Wabi Hill and telling myself that this was home.)

Having bared my soul on the importance of charm and friendliness in a community, I will also point out an area that needs changing, and that can be changed. I am by nature a loyal customer and will stay with a supplier indefinitely unless I am given a good reason to switch. I will do my best to explain the issues that have been cranking my gears for months without identifying anyone or any business. You will have to come to your own conclusions.

I believe I now have reasons to switch loyalties and they are only to do with appearance and friendliness. Appearance came first and I then discovered friendliness.

(I know that winters put huge stresses on business owners trying to keep their floors clean and dry. Snow tracks in and melts leaving dirty puddles where the customers have been. It takes a mop and a bucket and a couple of hands to clean the mess – and then it has to be done again, and maybe again. I know the routine; my wife of 55 years, Mirja, used to let me help out in her store.)

On impulse I glanced at the competitor as I motored by and noticed an attractive exterior. It was winter and the business was facing the same challenges as the competition. So I turned in and darkened the door. To my pleasant surprise the floor was clean, the premises attractively orderly.

As a memorable bonus, the clerk gave me a hearty welcome. How could I be unimpressed?

As if one bonus was not sufficient, I encountered another in the clean, well appointed washrooms. For an old man, if there is one facility that tops the list of essentials it is a clean public washroom. I'll be back!

So there, I've bared my soul again.

Is Chetwynd open for business? You bet we are! And we've got the award to prove it. Drop in at the District Centre and see it for yourself.

But the award is only as good as the people and the businesses it represents. If eternal vigilance is the price of liberty (Canadians, wake up), so eternal effort is the price of holding our own in the competitive world of business (Chetwynd, don't sleep on the job).

Relax our efforts, become careless or complacent, and customers, fickle or fastidious, will move down the street or across the line and may not return. What we lose once we may never have a chance to lose again.

By the way, I keep encountering little sparkles of wisdom like this one from thousands of years ago: "Be sure you know the condition of your flocks, give careful attention to your herds; for riches do not endure forever." That could be updated to read: "Be sure you know the condition of your inventory, and give careful attention to your customers' sensibilities; for riches do not endure forever."

Merlin Nichols, Mayor

PROVINCE PHASING OUT BC HOME PARTNERSHIP PROGRAM

The BC Home Owner Mortgage and Equity Partnership program will come to an end on March 31, 2018, due to its low participation rate.

Applications received by March 31, 2018, will be considered for approval. Current program recipients will not be affected.

When the program was introduced, it was anticipated it would provide 42,000 loans over a three-year period. However, as of January 31, 2018, there were fewer than 3,000 loans approved.

The Province is creating a new HousingHub within BC Housing, funded in part by winding down the BC HOME program.

The HousingHub will actively seek out and facilitate new partnerships to build affordable housing, while also developing innovative models to allow prospective homeowners to purchase homes and build equity.

business owners through the yearly Chamber of Commerce's "business walks."

Galbraith and Economic Development Officer Ellen McAvany were there to accept the award on behalf of Chetwynd. This is an amazing opportunity for Chetwynd, by helping showcase Chetwynd as being ready and willing to welcome new business to our town. Galbraith mentioned that usually this award is won by a town who has nominated themselves, but what is different about this situation is that Chetwynd did not nominate themselves and was actually nominated by someone of the public.

The next item was the recommendation to postpone the large water/sewer project on 47th Avenue NW that was expected to take place this year. Instead, they will allocate the funds needed to complete the project in 2018. The reason behind this is the simple fact of not having to open the road twice which includes re-paving which will save time and money in the long run. All of the design and survey work is done and the project is shovel ready, expected to be tendered in 2019. The other infrastructure project planned for this year on 47th Street NE (near Murray's Pub) is described as higher priority than 47th Avenue NW and is ready to be tendered for this spring/summer.

The last item on the agenda was a Zoning Amendment application looking to re-zone a lot located at 4721 Airport Rd. from Airport industrial A1 to light industrial M1. The application saw much discussion from Council on whether the application should proceed to a public hearing. While the airport building has sat, unoccupied for many years, the main concern was that "light industrial- M1" allows for many things including a laundromat, automotive sales and many more usages, but does not allow for airport usage. Another concern that was raised by Council was that the District of Chetwynd does not pick out singular lots to re-zone, they pick areas to re-zone. After the decision came to a vote and was tied at 3- 3, deciding whether it would proceed to public hearing, Mayor Nichols made the final decision and will allow the application to move on to the next step.

PROTECTING CHILDREN, SENIORS AND VULNERABLE BRITISH COLUMBIANS

Vulnerable people will be safer because of improvements to the Community Care and Assisted Living Act, said Premier John Horgan. "Whether people are choosing child care, a residential-care facility for an elder, or a recovery home for those they love, they need information to make the best care choices," said Premier Horgan. "These changes to the law will give families the ability to make more informed decisions about who will care for the ones they love."

The Community Care and Assisted Living Act regulates the licensing of community-care facilities, including child-care and residential-care facilities, which offer assistance for seniors, those with developmental disabilities, mental-health and substance-use disorders, and brain injuries.

The act also oversees registration of assisted living residences, such as homes for adults, which offer some support with day-to-day needs, while allowing people to retain their independence.

"These legislative changes create transparency for individuals and facility operators, and make sure consistent information is available so families can easily check to see if a facility or residence is operated legally, and whether there have been any substantiated complaints about the care they provide," said Health Minister Adrian Dix.

Information on care facilities can be difficult to find, and a family may not know if there have been any substantiated investigations or complaints about the location or operator. In addition, there is no information posted about unlawfully operating facilities.

The amendments will make sure that information on all these facilities is posted at an easily accessible location online, and that information is consistent throughout all regions of the province. Information available will include summaries of inspection reports, as well as summaries of substantiated complaints.

The name of the operator, the name of the facility and the addresses of the facility will be posted, unless doing so would be a health and safety risk for the people in care.

"Child care should be a place where our kids grow and learn and thrive, and the foundation of that has to be safety," said Katrine Conroy, Minister of Children and Family Development. "As a mom and a granny, I understand how important it is for families to know their child is being cared for in a place that is properly run and legally operated."

For child-care providers, summaries of substantiated complaints and inspection reports will be posted for five years for both licensed facilities and facilities operating unlawfully. Currently, only high-level summaries of inspection reports for licensed facilities are posted. High-level, substantiated complaint summaries are available at this time only for licensed seniors' long-term care facilities. By policy, these are posted for a period of only two years.

For all residential-care facilities, both licensed and those operating unlawfully, summaries of substantiated complaints and inspection reports will be posted for five years for both licensed facilities and those operating unlawfully. High-level summaries of substantiated complaints reports are currently also posted by policy for two years for assisted-living facilities.

Under the amendments, they will be available for five years by law. Inspection reports will also be accessible for the same timeframe.

As part of the Province's child-care initiative, an additional $2.09 million has been added to the Ministry of Health's budget to boost the number of health authority licensing officers. These officers inspect and monitor care facilities, such as child-care places.

Information on child-care and residential-care facilities will be located on health authority websites. Information on assisted living facilities will be located on the Assisted Living Registry website. The revised websites with the new information are anticipated to be up and running by fall 2018.

KELSEY'S CHRONICLE

Many people have heard the phrase "it's raining cats and dogs," referring to a torrential downpour of rain. The etymology of this phrase is actually unknown to this day. Many theories have been thrown out there as to where this phrase could be from, but none of them are significant enough to even mention. Something that is really interesting is that it has actually rained fish and frogs! Thus should technically be the phrase we use as it's not even all that uncommon to see fish and frogs raining from the sky.

This strange occurrence dates back to ancient days and only happens during times of extreme rain and only happens in the event of a powerful waterspout or a water tornado. We've all heard of that awful movie Sharknado that actually managed to get a sequel, well now you can picture a "fishnado" which is actually the term some scientists use to describe this weird phenomenon.

In 1794, French soldiers gave accounts of seeing toads falling from the sky. In 1947 in Louisiana the same thing happened but with fish, and they estimated 1 fish per square yard. But why does this happen? They theorize that any unusually powerful updraft could lift small organisms or organic material into the sky during a storm, carrying it kilometres away from where it was uplifted.

Depending on the strength of the wind and the other debris that has been swept up, many times the fish and frogs are startled but still very much alive. In other cases fish and frogs, even worms have been found frozen or completely encased in ice.

In Yoro, Honduras, the raining of fish has actually been a yearly occurrence for the past century. In 1998 they began holding a festival each year called "Lluvia de Peces" celebrating the weird phenomenon.

I'm kinda glad that we will never see something like this happen around here. Can you imagine the smell the fish would leave if you didn't find and dispose of each and every one??? But ya never know, it might be a cool sight. I see a trip to Yoro for "Lluvia de Peces" getting added to the bucket list.

HIGHER EFFICIENCY WILL LEAD TO LOWER ENERGY BILLS AND EMISSIONS

Government is making regulatory changes that will reduce energy bills for British Columbians, and support the Province's energy objectives, including electricity conservation and greenhouse-gas emission reduction targets.

Amendments to the Energy Efficiency Standards Regulation, under the Energy Efficiency Act, include new and updated energy efficiency standards for gas fireplaces, residential heat pumps, general service lighting, windows for smaller-buildings and consumer electronic products. The changes will come into effect from June 2018 to January 2020.

"Our government committed to making life more affordable, and these changes will help British Columbians save more than $25 million on their energy bills by 2025," said Michelle Mungall, Minister of Energy, Mines and Petroleum Resources. "Better performance standards provide families and businesses with energy-efficient options that will conserve energy and lower greenhouse-gas emissions."

The new and updated standards will result in 1.14 million gigajoules per year of energy savings in B.C. by 2025, which is equivalent to the energy requirement of 10,400 average homes. These standards also will reduce greenhouse-gas emissions by 27,500 tonnes in B.C. by 2025, which is equivalent to taking 7,000 light-duty vehicles off the road.

"To meet our greenhouse-gas reduction targets, we know serious work is needed to accomplish emissions reduction," said George Heyman, Minister of Environment and Climate Change Strategy. "These amendments represent our continuing commitment to take real leadership on climate change."

The Energy Efficiency Standards Regulation sets energy-performance standards for devices that use, control or affect the use of energy such as windows, household appliances, space-heating systems, water heaters, lighting and some industrial equipment.

The Ministry of Energy, Mines and Petroleum Resources regularly consults with stakeholders and the public on proposals for new standards and updates to existing standards. This the sixth major amendment to the regulation since 2006.
